Dear Godmother, Dear Godfather,

As everywhere in Southeast Asia on a massive scale and as elsewhere in the world, sometimes insidiously but always exponentially, Chinese are imposing an inescapable presence in Vietnam. Some Vietnamese opponents of the regime even accuse them of having chosen the leaders in power and of running the police. In any case, their involvement in Saigon's misguided development is real. The city is exploding with towers, traffic, noise, cheap products... The fruits and vegetables themselves bear the stamp of intensive and chemical farming methods from China. Faced with this, the Sisters have decided to produce everything themselves. They grow fruit trees, vegetables, coffee, tea, yoghurt... During the interviews, they often warn the children you sponsor about the danger of all the chemicals that are now common in Vietnamese food. And this development, which seems to have no limits, attracts more and more people from the countryside in the impossible hope of finding a better future. Alas, the disillusionment is living up to their expectations. And every year we meet more precariousness, more despair, more poverty. The Sisters don't stop for a second, they don't know Sundays or holidays. This is unfortunately never enough! Saigon does not cease to generate more and more poor families, left on the edge of a growth that is inaccessible to them. But as every year, the children and young people we meet force our admiration by their determination and courage.

The children of Cho Quan School.

Les élèves de l'école maternelle de Mai Anh B.

The affection classes, which you support with generosity and fidelity, continue to be a haven of peace for the children who attend them, where they can forget their harsh daily reality. Watching them laugh, dance and play, no one can imagine the drama that is sometimes played out in their homes. The drama of poverty is often the cruellest. In some families, it is impossible to shower the children more than twice a month. The Sisters, apart from a high quality school education and a daily meal, then take care of bathing these children when they go to school. This is why this year, the Mai Anh B nursery school will use part of the sponsorship money to renovate the sanitary facilities of the school.

Thanks to you, 112 school children are being sponsored in Vietnam and 93 project sponsorships distributed among the affection classes of Mai Anh B, Cho Quan, Binh Loi and Binh Tan. As you have understood, the urgency always comes from the four affection classes that we support and which allow many needy children to go to school without interruption ! We know how difficult it is sometimes for you to ensure your own sponsorship but your commitment is essential to help these children believe in a future. So help them by telling your family and friends about Mission Enfance sponsorships! (<http://mission.enfance.org/blog/2014/03/13/parrainer-au-vietnam/>)

Find the pictures of this 2019 mission on our Mission Enfance Facebook page ! On our website (www.mission.enfance.org), you will also find information and photos related to the sponsorship. Also, for all those who haven't yet given us their email address, don't hesitate to do so, it will facilitate our exchanges and will allow me to send you pictures of your godchildren and the projects you support.

I am at your disposal should you require any further information and, for those who live in our region, I will always be delighted to welcome you to our premises.

With kind regards,

Karine Drouet
Responsable du parrainage
